

Dream by Clay Nash

March 2022

The dream began with Dutch Sheets creating a thread on Signal titled "Gathering the Mavericks." He requested those on the thread to meet him in Oregon City, Oregon (which happens to be the end of the Oregon trail). He requested we arrive precisely on May 7. Upon arrival he informed us we were there to help gather and drive Maverick Steers back to Independence, Missouri (which happens to be the beginning of the Oregon trail). He instructed us that the Mavericks must be brought to Independence in order to achieve independence. He stated that as we found the watering holes where they were gathered he would assign some to stay at the watering holes. The purpose for this was to keep other Mavericks that would gather there from muddying up the water holes in the future. Dutch informed those there that they were assigned certain horses to make the journey on. The horse he assigned me was a horse I had once owned. This horse was an Appaloosa named Judge. He had my Hereford saddle on him (I still own this saddle today). Dutch was to ride to prettiest Buckskin I ever remember seeing. When I remarked of the strength and beauty in this horse, he informed us that this horse was named Messenger and was a descendent of John Wayne's favorite horse named Sent. I asked him where the Mavericks were and his answer was, "We must find them along the way." He informed us that it was highly strategic that we start the journey on May 7. The grub wagon was there, packed and ready. Ken Malone pulled Dutch Sheets to the side, but was within hearing distance, and said, "Isn't that Gordon Lindsey on the grub wagon?" Dutch answered and said, "Yes, but he can still cook food with Heavenly nourishment and will bring healing along the way if needed." Dutch began to inform those there of various watering holes they would be dropped off at along the journey. He did not assign one to me. I asked why and his answer was that I know about cattle drives, and he needed me to scout on the whole journey. (I have never been on a cattle drive) We headed out 7 minutes after 3. At 3 minutes after 7 we arrived at first watering hole and discovered Mavericks there. He assigned Mary Glazier and Eleanor Roehl to be watchman that night over the Mavericks. The process would repeat through 12 watering holes, ending in Independence, Missouri. As Dutch dropped off leaders at watering holes we picked up others who were there waiting. When we arrived at Independence, Missouri I stated that we must have over 10,000 Mavericks. He informed us that there was actually 12,000 Mavericks and one oxen. Dutch was asked, what we were to do with them. Dutch informed that they would be disciplined to go forth into the fields, ripe unto harvest, and disciple the nation. Someone asked about the oxen. Dutch informed us the oxen's name was Sign & Wonder and he would follow them in the discipling of the nation. Gordon Lindsey then informed Dutch that his assignment was up but others from the cloud of witnesses would be joining as needed.
