Prophetic over Wisconsin
By Jacquie Tyre

Even as Wisconsin is covered in snow and cold for months of the year and then spring comes to melt away one season to make way for the land to move into the next. Even so I am rising as the Son of Righteousness over Wisconsin to melt away what has kept you in the last season for an extended period of time. There is and has been a faithful remnant that has faithfully prayed and contended for the breakthrough, and those prayers have been building up, pressing against the walls of resistance that have held you in a captivity of the past.

Take courage and be strengthened, Ekklesia, for I have heard and I am moving, and soon and very soon you shall see the melting of the past giving way into what I have purposed for the future. That which has held back and contained in days gone by, shall suddenly be released as a display of My Spirit in increasing power and movement to impact not only your land but all that surround you.

So find yourself aligning with My Spirit in these days, shake off the hope deferred and move with My Spirit.
